Plate 1	primary colour in colour wheel	12
Plate 2	Secondary colours in colour wheel	12
Plate 3	colours are in harmony with the nature	14
Plate 4	Yellow and black are used to reinforce the skull and crossbones danger message	14
Plate 5	If you paint a cold room in a warm colour, such as red, you will create a room that is psychologically warm- it will be associated with flames, heat and fire	15
Plate 6	A house of the Yukpta Indians, western Venezuela	22
Plate 7	A red circle with a line passing through it is universally understood as a prohibition message. Red signals danger and the precise nature of the message is described by the black icon.	22
Plate 8	Indian peasant house	25
Plate 9	Dialogue between old and new on a town-planning scale. High-rise buildings in non-colours as a backdrop for red brick houses	25
Plate 10	Living area as a relaxing space- creamy white & sky blue giving calm and serenity	26
Plate 11	Cambodian Buddhist temple white and gold colours enhance the compassion	26
Plate 12	Spacious outdoor decks framing views of the Caribbean with colourful wall elements	28
Plates 13, 14	lighting level on same colour changes the quality of a space	29
Plate 15	The living room wall appears rosy and warm, the brick of the stairwell bluish and cool. Lighting and texture create the difference. The rough brick adds even more shadows to the dim hallway, while the smooth wall picks up warmth from the windows and surrounding wood	30
Plate 16	The white wall of the kitchen is covered with lime, mixed with white sand and a trace of yellow pigments. The contrast of the yellow-green lime and red bricks beneath creates a luminous effect. On the counter, the cobalt blue tile is a counter-point to the warm wood and stone. Benches taken from the Paris Metro are a humorous urban touch.	30
Plate 17	Tinted glass of decorated window	31
