

References

- Babu, D.S., Ganesh Babu, K. and Wee, T.H. (2005). Properties of lightweight expanded polystyrene aggregate concrete containing fly ash.
- Chen Xiong, Mingjin Chu, Jiliang Liu, Zhijuan Sun. (2018). Shear behavior of precast concrete wall structure based on two-way hollow core precast panels.
- Faniran, O. O., & Cabon, G. (1998). Minimizing Waste in Construction Project Sites. Engineering Construction & Architectural Management, pp 182-188.
- Fernando, P.L.N., Jayasinghe, M.T.R., and Jayasinghe, C. (2017). Structural Feasibility of Expanded Polystyrene based lightweight concrete sandwich wall panels.
- Hong Ni, Zhe Xiong, Lijuan Li, Feng Liu, Dong Su, Yi Zhou, Zonglou Zhang, Jing Lu. (n.d.). Feasibility of a novel prefabricated concrete wall system for masonry structures.
- Jiayuan Wang, H. Y., & Xiangping Kang, W. L. (2009). Critical success factors for on-site sorting of construction waste. Resources, Conservation and Recycling, 931-936.
- Satheeskumar Navaratnam, Tuan Ngo, Tharaka Guanwardena, and David Henderson. (2019). Performance Review of Prefabricated Building.
- Karolos, J., Lasonas, B., Katerina, G.T, (2023) Analyzing the impact of insulation material properties on the thermal performance of a novel composite precast concrete walling system exposed to elevated temperatures.